Hi!
We use google classroom. I don't invite parents though. In the beginning we named it something that did not identify the group, but the kids knew what it was. "Bubbles" was what they came up with. Kind of random, but they all knew.
-Good problem to have though, are you getting an increase in allies or students that identify as LGBTQ? We really need more allies in our group :(

Good morning, all! We had our first meeting today, and a record number of kids showed up. I am struggling, however, figuring out the best way to communicate with such a large group. I set up a Remind account so that I can text them, but some of the kids don't have phones. I talked about setting up a "class" in Google Classroom because that's what all of the teachers here are required to use, but some of the kids were worried about their parents having access.

What platforms do you use for club communication?

Thanks!
